DRAFTING THE PROTOCOL

Frince Hohenlohe, German Ambassador to Paris, bert Bismarck and Count d'Aunay, of the French Legation at Berlin, will assist Herr Radowitz in drafting the protocol. AT THE RADSIWILL PALACE.

The Wilhelmstrasse is still in considerable confusion. Servants are busy to various parts of the Radziwill Palace, where the Congress is to sit, moving chairs and tables from one wing to the other. The Radziwill Palace is an old fashjoned structure in the flat renaissance, characteristic of the later style of the eighteenth century. It occupies three sides of a quadrangle, the fourth being taken up by a paved court, with a garden in front, and while unpretending in size and design, the building has yet an aristocratic

APPEARANCE OF THE BUILDING. The large windows of the central section betoken noble halls; the low side wings indicate indifference to the use of space, while the obsolete architecture bine, with the new painting of the walls, to show antiquity in an excellent state of repair. THE INTERIOR

The interior of the building is in keeping with the front view. A wide hall and a spacious staircase lead to a central circular saloon, extending the entire eagth of the building- the appointed home of the Con greet. All the spartments are finished in white stucco with Grecian columns, percaps a little bare, but noble in their chaste and lofty simplicity. There is a special entrance to the wing inhabited by Princess Bremarck, guarden by well proportioned statues of

QUEREC, Canada, June 12, 1878.

IBY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD. 1

The labor troubles, which for the last few days have created intense excitement in the city culminated to-day in one of the most unfortunate series of riots which have ever disgraced Quebec. For many days previously deeds of violence, which have been regularly brought before the notice of the uthorities, have been committed by rioters, without apparently receiving any notice or attention from those who might reasonably have been looked to to take action in the premises. Between 4,000 and 3,000 of the strikers assembled early to-day at the Jacques Cartter Hall, where they were addressed by one of their number, who said that any caught stealing would be immediately strung up. Their object, he stated, was only to force all the men to strike of work. This individual is said to be a French Communist. At the conclusion of his remarks the strikers, headed by the tricolor, proceeded to Mr. Peters, Strotche, Mr. Peters in the meantime made a demand to the Mayor for protection. The whole of the available men of the police force, under the command of Captain Heighan, were immediately despatched to the scene, and the mounted force and two divisions of the infantry of B battery, consisting of about one hundred men, under the command of Colonel Strange, were also, upon the application of the Mayor, sent to the assistance of the police.

BREAKING INTO PETERS' OFFICE

Finding the door of Mr. Peters' office closed th mob smashed it open and entered, smashing everything it contained. They then searched for Mr. Peters, whom they coerced into signing the document binding him to pay all hands in his employ at least one dollar a day.

STONING THE SOLDIERS.

When the cavalry, under the command of Cantair Short, made their appearance and attempted to disperse the crowd they were met with leys of stones, which for the space of several minutes fell as thick as buil, severa men in the battery were bruised and cut with stones. the Adjutant (Captain Prevost) receiving a very nely scalp wound, which was dressed by Surgeon Nellson. The riot act not having been read the brave troops were compelled to stand and bear assaults until Colonel Strange withdrew to the Jacques Cartier Hall, where the wounds of those who had been cut by stones were dressed.

SPEECH BY THE PREMIER.

Meanwhile the rioters had proceeded by Hon. Premier Jolly, who addressed them in a few firm, yet kindly words, counselling them to remain quiet and orderly, that they could not hope to obtain $1 by acting unlawfully, and assured them that there was law for the poor as well as for the rich, and that he trusted they would be guilty of no violation of it.

WERCKING PLOUR STORES

On arriving in Paul street, in front of Mr. Renaula's stores, that gentleman advanced to meet the strikers and attempted to reason with them

Having no police or other force at his back, hor ever, Mr. Renauld was quickly pushed aside by the mob, who retused to hear what he had to say. The flour stores were broken into and each man set to work to help himself out of its contents. Carters who happened to be in the vicinity were pressed toto the work of drawing away the stolen property, while large quantities were removed by boats from the whart; 250 barrels and 150 bags of flour were thus ATTACKED BY CAVALRY.

The military baving arrived, the cavalry rode through the mob with drawn swords, attempting to disperse it. The rioters, however, clated with their past success, refused to separate, but attacked the force with stones from behind and attempted to turn the troopers by catching the bridles of their borser. Finding that temporizing with the mob had no effect, the Mayor read the Riot act and Colonel Strange, commandant of the forces, and an English officer of high reputation ordered the first company of his men to fire. The soldiers fired across the angle of Paul and Dambourges streets. Two or three of the leading rioters tell, ton were shot, one

Edward Beau louard, a native of France, twenty two years of age, and but two years in the country, one of the leaders of the riot, was killed.

PLIGHT OF THE ROTERS. The wounded are not fatally injured. The only other death was that of a carter's horse. The moral effect of Beaudouard's death was immense, the rioters dispersing in all directions. The corpse presented a ghastly spectacle. The skull was smashed in and the eyebails protruding. It now lies in the Morgue, and au inquest will be held in the morning. The riot was witnessed by 3,000 people from the adjoining heights of the Grand Battery. Captain Short, commanding the cavalry, had his head broken by a stone

A number of rioters received severe sword cuts on the face.

MONTREAL, June 12, 1878. Three regiments of the volunteers, viz :- First, or Prince of Wales Rifles, under Major Bond, mustering about eighteen officers and two bundred men. Third, or Victoria Rifles, under Colonel Handyside, 20 officers and 250 men. and Fitth Royal Fusileers, under Colonel Crawford, 22 officers and 250 men, proceeded to Quebec this evening by special train at ten o'clock. The whole under command of Colonel Fletcher, Deputy Adjutant General, accompanied by Colonel Bacon. Brigado Major Neen only received notice cailing them out about five o'clock, and many went off at the last moment without notice having reached them. An immense crowd gathered at the railway depot to see them off and the men were cheered most enthusiastically as they marched down from the City Hall to the depot. Outside of the desire to see our volunteers distinguish themselves in preserving law and order in the sister city, there is no general sympathy or excitement among the people here on behalf of the Quebec strikers. It is recognized here that the leading feature in the riots has been the Communistic element. The train is expected

RAPID TRANSIT ACCIDENTS.

EXPLOSION ON THE METROPOLITAN ELEVATED BAILWAY-A PIREMAN PATALLY INJURED. At a quarter to eleven o'clock last night the "dip the smokestack of engine No. 12 on the Metropolitan Elevated Railroad exploded, and Fireman Samuel J. Sparks, of Perhamville, received injuries which it is believed will prove tatal. It appears that Sparks was sent last night to watch the engine on which he was injured, and another one in the rea of it, the two locomotives being then said up for the night at the Rector street station, with the steam artially exhausted on both. It is stated that Spark was on a stool in a corner facing the lever used by the engineer, "enting something," when the explosion took place. He became alarmed at the noise and out burst of steam, and doubtless imagining that the boiler had exploded, codesvoured to save himself by jumping out of the window of the locomotive. He treetlework of the track to the paved street below where he was picked up in an insensible condition by the passers by. A considerable crowd of alarmed spectators were speedily collected on the spot, and the police were also quickly on hand. The locomotive was carefully examined by the reporter, and the only damage found was the exploded "the up" tube. The clock, which stands slide by saids with the steam gang, was not stopped by the explosion, and marked seven minutes after eleven at the time when it was seen.

gauge, was not stopped by the explosion, and marked seven minutes after eleven at the time when it was seen.

Sparks isy for several minutes in the street before he was taken up and placed on the sidewalk on the west side of the street. In about fitteen minutes an ambulance arrived, and he was placed in it and rapidly driven to the Chambers Street Hospital. There he was found to be bleeding at the eyes, nose and ears. No burns of any account were found; but a close examination revealed the fact that the base of the man's skul was fractured. The attending physicians pronounced his injuries fatal, saying that he could not live through the anght.

A sight accident, which might have resulted in serious consequences, happened yesterday morning to the hoisting engine on the New York Elevated road. The hoisting apparatus, with its englise attached, was on the down track, at the junction of Third and Fourth avenues. In order to change its position to the opposite track stout planks were laid, across the intervening space, the wheels taken off the engine and blocks and tackle applied to move it over the planks. When about two feet on its way a crash startied the workmen, and the engine was seen to side down. As no cars were passing at the time, no one was nort, though travel on the Third avenue line was interrupted for a short while. The cumbrous matchine was replaced with some difficulty in its original position.

officer of the Court of General Sessions, who had taken him from the Tombs on an order from the Court. The other participants in the robbery were bailed some time since, and Miner was the only one in custody.

The robbery, one of the cleverest on record, was perpetrated on Mr. James A. Young, of No. 49 Nassau street, and was participated in by George Carsob, alias Little George, alias J. H. Carinate; Horace Abrahams, alias Horace Horan, alias Little Horace, alias C. Burton; Charlotte Dougherty, alias Caririe Abrahams, shas Mra C. Burton, and Rufus Miner, alias R. Andrews and Little Kufe. On the day of the robbery the clerk in the office of Mr. Young was called out to see a rich gentleman in a carriage, and while absent from the office securities to the face value of over $100,000 were trken. Immediately alter the robbery the principals disappeared and were not heard of uciti they were arrested in Petersturg, Va., on the 22d of March. Mr. Young's bonds were found in their possession, and, in admitch, a large number of bonds stolen from the National Bank of Cortlandt, N. Y. The market value of the bonds recovered reached $350,000. The thieves were brought to New York and on the 23th of March committed to the Tombs, without bell. It appears that George Coursene and Charlotte Dougherty, hve since been liberated on ball, and Miner only was left to waive bail and disappear, inquiries at the Tombs last night brought out only the ract that Miner had been taken away by a court officer, from whom he had escaped.
